WELCOME TO THE ACTIVITY REPORT FOR 2018

Humana People to People Foundation was registered in Switzerland in 2013. It was founded by the Federation for Associations connected to the International Humana People to People Movement and contributes to worldwide social development projects and activities, in particular to the Humana People to People programmes and projects.

Humana People to People Foundation gives support within four objectives according to its statutes:

1. Assistance in the case of emergency and disaster
2. Development
3. Protection of the natural habitat
4. Research and innovation

Humana People to People Foundation focuses on three lines of activities within the fields of promoting health and fighting diseases, education, and community development.

In 2018 Humana People to People Foundation granted 428,000 USD to five organisations based in India, South Africa, UK and Zimbabwe, supporting a total of nine social development projects.

In some of the projects, the funds from Humana People to People Foundation complemented funds from other partners, thus contributing to having more activities going on at the same time within a project and further enriching the lives of many people.

On the following pages we present the main results from the nine projects that from each their angle show how positive changes can happen when people get the knowledge and understanding about the issue at hand and are encouraged to take action.

With greetings from the Committee of Humana People to People Foundation,

PROMOTING HEALTH AND FIGHTING DISEASES

As the world slowly sees HIV and AIDS as a more manageable burden, TB has emerged as a major life threat.

TB has been treatable and preventable for decades thus being a disease of the past. Years of neglecting the rights of the world's poor to basic health care, food and shelter have let TB take hold again and allowed resistance to build.

TB is the top infectious killer worldwide, claiming around 4,400 lives a day. It remains the leading cause of death among people living with HIV, causing one in three AIDS-related deaths. In 2017, 1.6 million people died from TB, including around 300,000 people living with HIV.

A UNAIDS report shows the estimated annual number of new HIV infections among adults remains nearly static at about 1.9 million, however the global figure masks regional disparities that must be addressed to achieve the reductions required to end the AIDS epidemic by 2030.

HIV and TB co-infection means one has a 15 times higher risk of losing life as compared to one who is only HIV positive. Combining the fight against HIV and TB is important in promoting healthy lives.

Humana People to People Foundation believes that building capacity of communities to fight the two major diseases is crucial to protect lives of the poor who are already struggling to support their lives. Many people who are infected by TB and HIV need more knowledge about how to deal with the diseases, and they need support to get linked up to health services so they get access to diagnosis, treatment, care and support services. They also need support to remain in the prescribed treatment.

In 2018, Humana People to People Foundation supported four health projects that are responding to the universal 2030 Agenda for getting in control of HIV and TB. The projects have empowered people to take informed decisions to control the spread of HIV and TB and other diseases. Health campaigns in communities and schools, targeting children, youths and adults, proved vital to provide health information and increase people's demand for medical health support.

The following pages show how it was done.

Prevention and Control of TB in Delhi

Society of Service to Voluntary Agencies (SOSVA) in India received a grant of USD 12,000 from Humana People to People Foundation in 2018 for its programme Prevention and Treatment of Tuberculosis (TB). The programme is now in its fourth year of operation. In 2018, a new area in the slums of Delhi was included.

India is still among the countries that are hardest hit with the burden of TB. It is estimated that 800 to 1,000 people die every day of the disease in India, and in spite of free TB treatment and care for all, it is assumed that more than 30% of the victims are not accessing the free health care. The main drivers of TB are malnutrition, smoking, diabetes and the HIV virus. Multidrug resistant (MDR) TB is the new threat and the population of MDR patients in India is the second largest after China.

SOSVA continued to work alongside government clinics in the slums of Delhi, aiming to reduce TB stigma, identify and diagnose TB infected persons, and monitor medication administration.

During the six months of the project's operation in 2018, it was in direct contact with 2,400 people to inform and discuss about TB. Of these, 360 people were referred for examinations, and 126 of them were diagnosed with TB by the TB Service Providers and were enrolled for treatment under the Direct Observed TB Treatment Service (DOTS). SOSVA had to put more emphasis on following up on TB patients to secure adherence to the treatment, because of several defaulters.

Five community awareness camps, and a nutrition camp was conducted in the area. Also a bigger mass awareness campaign was held with several doctors attending, where people could have basic health check-ups and were encouraged to form local teams to take the lead in improving better hygiene and sanitation in the slum areas.

Tackling Tuberculosis at Mukobeko Maximum Security Prison in Zambia

TB Alert, a UK based organisation aiming at tackling TB in UK and the developing world, received a grant of USD 30,000 from Humana People to People Foundation in 2018.

The grant has been used to carry out activities that address the high level of TB and co-infection of TB/HIV in Mukobeko Maximum Security Prison in Kabwe in Zambia with a local organisation, Chichetekolo Outreach Partners (COP), as the implementing partner. The project started in July 2018 and ends in June 2019.

The background for the project is that Zambian prisons in general suffer from extreme overcrowding, and are operating at 229% of capacity which has contributed to the fact that the TB and TB/HIV cases in Zambian prisons are 15-20% higher than in the general population.

Below are mentioned some of the activities that are carried out during the first six months of operation in 2018:

TB Alert provided training to 14 staff from COP and volunteers in the prison. They learned about symptoms, prevention, transmission, treatment, screening, counselling and adherence support. For COP to be able to carry out such projects in the future, their training continues during the whole project period.

To raise awareness among the inmates, 1,690 brochures and 65 posters were produced and distributed. 1,670 people were screened. Hereof 449 or 27% showed TB-like symptoms, and after further examinations 19 people were diagnosed with new cases of TB and started on treatment. 41 especially vulnerable people received food supplements to better be able to adhere to their treatment.

The activities are much appreciated among the inmates and the staff in Mukobeko who have lacked information on how to identify TB or TB/HIV symptoms, what it takes to treat the diseases, and how to prevent TB from spreading.

Total Control of the Epidemic Communities Forward in South Africa

Total Control of the Epidemic Communities Forward was awarded a USD 100,000 grant by Humana People to People Foundation in 2018. The project was implemented by Humana People to People South Africa with funding from USAID/Foundation for Professional Development as the main partner, and from other Humana People to People members.

Total Control of the Epidemic Communities Forward (TCE-CF) was initiated in 2014 and ended in October 2018. The project reached more than 600,000 people and provided counselling and testing services to a least 90% of this population over five years. The target was overachieved by approximately 10% compared to the original targets.

The project used a systematic methodology to help communities to take control of HIV and AIDS and TB epidemics. It equipped individuals with the tools they need to mitigate the consequences of HIV and AIDS and TB, to break down the stigma that still surrounds the epidemics, and to stop the spread of HIV.

The most successful methods to identify HIV positive people were found to be index tracking, mobile testing and targeted home based testing.

The Community Based HIV Counselling and Testing services have increased awareness on HIV and AIDS including TB, leading to behavior change, increased adherence to HIV treatment and reduction in new cases of infections. Uptake of HIV testing services in the rural areas has gone up. People living with the HIV virus are getting the support they need to remain on HIV treatment and are supported to achieve HIV viral load suppression.

Some of the project achievements in 2018 were: 91,872 people were tested for HIV with 5,515 found to be living with HIV. The HIV positive were referred for early HIV treatment. 86 TCE Field Officers provided HIV testing services during door-to-door campaigns. Screening for TB helped to refer 1,750 TB suspected cases for diagnosis with 637 confirmed TB cases enrolled for treatment.

219 workplaces were reached with HIV testing services with 2,082 people getting tested and 104 found HIV positive.

Index tracking has continued to be an effective method in finding the people still not tested for HIV. 6,149 family members and sexual partners were found via index tracking and were tested, and of these, 865 were found to be HIV positive. Among those who were tested 1,416 were sexual partners to the original index case.

38 clinics, working closely with TCE Communities Forward, conducted independent quality control of the HIV testing services being offered and verified the collected data. The arrangement follows stipulated government regulations demanding routine assessment of testing devices prior to HIV and TB testing.

Total Control of the Epidemic Nelson Mandela and O.R. Tambo in South Africa

Humana People to People Foundation awarded a grant of USD 58,000 to Humana People to People South Africa for the project Total Control of the Epidemic Nelson Mandela and O.R. Tambo. The grant complemented funds from the German development bank KfW, the American organisation Foundation for Professional Development (FDP) and funds from members of Humana People to People. The project started in October 2016 and ends in September 2019.

Total Control of the Epidemic (TCE) Nelson Mandela and O.R. Tambo provides HIV testing services to adolescent girls and young women between 15-24 years and their adult male sexual partners of age group 25-49 years. Adolescent girls and young women in this age group are at higher risk of HIV infection globally. Harmful gender norms and inequalities, obstacles to access to education and sexual and reproductive health services, poverty, food insecurity and violence are the key drivers of this increased vulnerability.

The project works with nine Community Based Organisations in implementing the HIV testing services, building their capacity through trainings to ensure sustainability.

For the past three years, 303,500 people were tested for HIV with 5% diagnosed HIV positive. Among the newly diagnosed and confirmed HIV positive, 11,500 were linked to care and treatment support.

Some of the achievements in 2018 were:

The project mobilised, counselled and tested people for HIV, provided comprehensive screening of TB and sexually transmitted diseases, and tested for some non-communicable diseases. It linked the newly diagnosed to care and treatment. Systematic door-to-door HIV testing and counselling, mobile and strategic twilight testing campaigns and index tracking were the approaches used to identify the yet-to-be-known HIV positive persons and enrol them on treatment.

114,000 people were tested for HIV with 5,700 testing HIV positive. The people found to be living with HIV were referred to HIV treatment at the local clinics and of these, 4,600 people were confirmed to have linked to care and HIV treatment.

113,900 people were screened for TB, with 5,900 TB suspects referred for treatment. TB, sexually transmitted infections and non-communicable diseases suspects were referred for further diagnoses and treatment at health facilities.

1,427,300 male and 83,700 female condoms were distributed to people following correct demonstration of appropriate condom use and disposal steps. Clinics have continuously supplied the condoms making it easier to support a network of community based condom outlets.

ACCESS TO EDUCATION

Education is a fundamental human right and a basis for guaranteeing the realization of other rights. It is essential for peace, tolerance, human fulfillment and sustainable development. According to UNESCO's report on global education from 2017, there is an urgent need to commit to providing meaningful education and training opportunities for the large population of out-of-school children and adolescents, who require immediate, targeted and sustained action ensuring that all children are in school and are learning.

A majority of countries have made tremendous progress in getting children into the classroom, and more children worldwide are now in school. But learning is not guaranteed by being in school. For about half of students, schooling does not equal learning. Education systems need to be strengthened and aligned so that the focus is on ensuring that all children learn.

Globally, girls are especially disadvantaged. 130 million girls never attend school worldwide, and millions more face barriers to staying in school. Yet, when girls are educated, their families are healthier, they have fewer children, they get married later, and they have more opportunities to pursue in life.

According to UNESCO, accountability and trust at all levels of the training are important components which place demands on the students, the teachers, the Ministry of Education and communities to collaborate. The relationship between school and community builds a strong bond when students and teacher join hands with the community to solve existing challenges. When the parents are involved in the education of their children, they further commit to supporting their continuous education.

The two education projects that received grants from Humana People to People Foundation in 2018 are operated by Humana People to People India. The projects transform lives, recognizing the important role of education as a main driver of development and in achieving the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals for 2030. The pedagogy used in these projects is inspired by a humanistic vision of education and development. It is based on human rights and dignity, social justice, inclusion, protection, cultural and ethnic diversity, and responsibility, and live up to providing accountability and trust on all levels.

The next pages explain more about the pedagogy being used to train teachers for primary schools and how out-of-school children are being supported and trained to enter into the public educational system at their adequate age level.

Necessary Teacher Training Programme in Haryana, India

Humana People to People Foundation awarded a grant of USD 50,000 to Humana People to People India for the programme Necessary Teacher Training (NeTT), implemented in the State of Haryana. The grant complements funding from other partners, among them Haryana State Department of Education, DELL Foundation and other Humana People to People organisations.

The NeTT programme in Haryana is a pre-service teacher training programme, carried out at seven District Institutes for Education and Training (DIET) and designed to train primary school teachers (Grade 1-5) through combining theoretical studies with practical experiences. Inspired by the Humana People to People concept for teacher training, the pedagogical methodology provides the students with a wide range of extra-curricular knowledge and skills together with extensive practice in teaching. The student teachers trained at NeTT in 2018 gained experiences of how to engage children in primary schools in becoming active learners, and participated in investigations and community actions, which gave them confidence in their own ability to initiate changes based on knowledge and understanding of the conditions in the schools and the communities.

Some of the programme's achievements in 2018 are: 626 student teachers from Team 2016 successfully graduated in July 2018. A total of 648 student teachers from Team 2017 completed their first year education and advanced to second year.

More than 28,000 primary school students and 1,000 primary school teachers were reached through teaching practice in 136 primary schools. Besides the teaching practice, the student teachers also got the opportunity to observe the functioning of school administration, duties of principal and teachers, exam delivery, identification and follow-up of children who dropped out of school. Thus, through teaching practice, the student teachers not only gained experience in teaching in the classroom but also got an exposure to the operation of the school in other aspects.

45 Special Pedagogical Sessions were conducted in all NeTT's for all teams. It is one of the essential components of the programme where student teachers, primary school teachers, DIET faculties and other local prominent people from the field of education come together and discuss on the Special Pedagogical Session topics of the respective period.

Four capacity building workshops were organised for the teachers and assistant teachers. The workshops have facilitated preparation of pedagogical material, assessment tools for the Necessary Teacher Training and improved the effectiveness of the programme.

Development and Expansion of Kadam Step-Up Programme

Humana People to People Foundation awarded a grant of USD 55,000 to Humana People to People India to further develop and expand the Kadam Step-Up programme for out-of-school children aged 6-14 years in India. Engaging in the development and expansion of the Kadam Step-Up programme creates a long-term impact while giving each child access to education.

The grant supported Humana People to People India's efforts to take the low-cost and successful education programme to scale and contributed to the Indian Government's policy of getting approximately six million out-of-school children enrolled in the formal school system.

The programme is based on a student-driven learning model, carried out through outcome and activity-based tasks, integrating cognitive, social and emotional skills and other general life skills. Children are pro-active in the learning process as they take a leading role in exploring and engaging. The teacher creates opportunities for children to explore, discover, experience and experiment.

An illustration of how the programme pedagogy plays out:

The programme started up in the state of Haryana. The successful implementation of the programme in Haryana has led Humana People to People India to sign agreements with three states to implement the programme and reach 128,000 children in total with education, with negotiations in place for similar agreements.

Humana People to People India signed a Memorandum of Understanding to implement the Kadam programme in Jammu & Kashmir for the next five years. The programme would cover up to 28,000 out-of-school children.

Humana People to People India is working closely with the Education State Department of Haryana in developing a curriculum for the preschool education. The organisation's educational material team is working with the State Council for Educational Research and Training (SCERT) to develop the Marathi version of the Kadam Tool-Kit and to get it approved by SCERT.

By mid-2018, a very successful Kadam Early Grade Reading project was completed in the state of Madhya Pradesh. 30,000 children have benefited from the programme and the assessment showed 2-3 fold improvement in many of the basic reading skills.

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

Poverty cannot be eradicated without addressing the pervasive inequalities in incomes and economic opportunities between and within countries, between rural and urban areas, and between men and women. Reducing such inequalities will need to start with improving access for the poor to productive resources, basic services and social protection.

Poverty is more than the lack of income and resources to ensure a sustainable livelihood. Its manifestations include hunger and malnutrition, limited access to education and other basic services, social discrimination and exclusion as well as the lack of participation in decision-making.

Progress in reducing poverty has happened on a global scale, but when zooming in, the progress has been uneven, with a few Asian countries, primarily China, accounting for most of the decline. The rate of poverty reduction has been much slower in low-income countries, especially in sub-Saharan Africa where the absolute number of poor has continued to increase.

Children are much exposed to the hardship of poverty. Many children are pushed into the labour market and forced to engage in economic activities to complement income sources which are not enough to cover basic family needs. Gender gaps are often more pronounced among the poor. For example, the gap in years of schooling between poor women and men is more than double of the gap among the non-poor.

Humana People to People Foundation sees Community Development as a core strategy to mobilise and organise people to create change in their own lives, from identifying what is needed in a community to organising groups to take action and enhance social cohesion.

Community Development happens in villages, where Village Action Groups are formed and get together to solve the pressing issues for the families and their children. It happens in the townships and the slums, where Community Action Groups are formed and act on the challenges they face. It happens in close cooperation with traditional leaderships, health and education institutions, government agencies, local organisations and faith-based groups.

The people in the three Community Development Projects supported by Humana People to People Foundation in 2018, took the lead in creating the changes they want, aiming to build a stronger foundation for better prospects for children, women and youths in their current and future lives. The focus was placed in finding lasting solutions, in getting access to education, improving health standards, improving food security, raising family income, achieving gender equality and offering skills to youths.

Community Development Programme in India

Humana People to People Foundation contributed with a grant of USD 65,000 to Humana People to People India in 2018 for the Community Development Programme (CDP). The funding complemented other grants from the government, business community, foundations and other Humana People to People organisations.

In 2018, Humana People to People India implemented the CDP programme in the states of Haryana, Telangana, Uttar Pradesh and Delhi. The programme is transforming the social and economic conditions for children, women and youth in rural communities and urban slums of India through involving them in community based development initiatives. The programme uses an integrated approach of development that strengthens vulnerable groups, empowers the weak and organises the community into Self Help Groups (SHGs), Women Action Groups, Youth Clubs and Adolescent Groups. The various population groups acquire different livelihood skills and knowledge, key in building their capacity to be self-reliant and economically stable.

The activities in 2018 have had the form of trainings in financial literacy, livelihood skills, community health campaigns, providing access to education to out-of-school children, promoting household gardening, actions to adapt to climate change, tree planting, discussions on early marriages and child rights awareness.

Some notable activities carried out in 2018 are:

894 women and youth received livelihood skills training that included beautician, tailoring and basic computer skills. 192 women and youths got employed or started small enterprises. 285 women took part in financial literacy sessions and how to access government financial schemes.

1,887 out-of-school children were enrolled in the Kadam Step-Up Centres which provide bridge education to out-of-school children, followed by their enrolment in formal schools. The teachers engaged the children in interactive learning activities for their holistic development. The children were provided mid-day meals at the centres to increase school retention and support class concentration. 1,440 children were enrolled in government primary schools after their graduation.

7,338 community members received free professional medical consultation and treatment. Humana People to People India together with staff from local clinics and hospitals established mobile health clinics, which gave easy access and catered for the medical needs of the community members and promoted healthy living.

752 kitchen gardens were established and have promoted the intake of organic and healthy food. The families were trained on garden farming, seasonal vegetables and how to produce herbs. The families grew cluster beans, lady finger, chilies, round gourd, egg-plant, spinach, tomato, coriander among other nutrition strengthening vegetables. 1,693 women participated in nutrition training sessions organised to improve nutrition deficiencies in the community.

44 lessons were organised to promote a safe and conducive environment for children's growth. The lessons included information on Right to Education, Right against Exploitation, Right to Equality, Child Abuse among others.

Community Centre for Artists in Zimbabwe

Springstone Trust runs a small artist community centre outside Harare, the capital of Zimbabwe. Humana People to People Foundation granted Springstone Trust USD 48,000 in 2018.

The idea of the centre is to offer Zimbabwean stone sculptors a physical and social environment that is conducive for creating new pieces of art, and to promote co-operation among established master stone sculptors and younger sculptors to carry forward this cultural heritage of Zimbabwe. The centre links the artists to national and international customers so the pieces of art can be sold.

The grant has contributed to a more stable operation of the centre under the prevailing economic hardships in Zimbabwe, thus giving the 40 artists connected to the centre an opportunity to concentrate on creating new pieces of art of such quality and volume that their art can generate an income and sustain their families. All participants are taking part in the operation of the centre, by carrying out maintenance of both infrastructure and tools for creating the art, by growing food for all using sustainable agricultural methods, and by creating an environment where the creativity of both experienced and younger artists can thrive in a continuous exchange of inspiration, views and techniques.

The centre has connections to several other artist communities around the country. It reaches out to the surrounding community with initiatives on income generating activities and receives school children and other visitors who are interested in the production of art.

During the year, a total of 1,000 sculptures and 59 paintings have been produced. The sales have seen a rise in 2018 partly because of the better quality of sculptures, which is as an immediate effect of the grant contributing to a more stable economy for the centre thus providing better support to the artists.

Child Aid Bakenberg in South Africa

Humana People to People Foundation supported Humana People to People South Africa with a grant of USD 10,000 to implement Child Aid Bakenberg in 2018. The awarded grant complements funds from Department of Health in South Africa, the business community, the National Lottery and other Humana People to People members.

Child Aid Bakenberg was started in 2006 in Waterberg district, and since then it has empowered communities, families and children with the capacity to develop their community. Child Aid Bakenberg serves as a local hub allowing community members access to necessary infrastructure facilities, skills training, youth development and health education, and functions as a venue for culture events and community meetings.

In 2018, Child Aid Bakenberg was working with 3,000 families through supporting orphaned and vulnerable children to access social grants and educational services. Over time, the community members are beginning to work as a unity in improving their health and protecting the environment.

Some achievements of the project in 2018 are:

2,400 people were trained in climate smart agriculture to equip and empower them to start own backyard gardening, which also became income generating projects. The initiatives have strengthened household economy for economically vulnerable families to better meet basic social and economic needs.

3,346 community members took part in discussions on improving household sanitation, health and hygiene. The opportunity was utilized to test for HIV, TB and some non-communicable diseases.

12 preschools from six villages received mentorship support impacting 336 children. Early childhood education among the participating children was raising confidence and strengthening cognitive and motor skills development.
